IAMCR 2014: Region as a Frame: Politics, Presence, Practice

The conference theme seeks to explore the dynamics of media systems, communication patterns and organizational relationships within the new “framing” of region as a physical and conceptual category. Sub-themes and topics may include: What are the politics that drive media discourse, organization and economics? What kind of presence is at all possible in this redefined regional space, and how does region become a real and imagined construct across new media presences? What sorts of practices then become key to media and communication spaces enclosed in or defined by this new frame?
